Summer Treatment Program

What is the Summer Treatment Program?

This unique program provides treatment for children ages 5 to 12 and adolescents ages 13-15 with Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder or similar disorders. It is tailored to each child's behavioral, emotional, and learning needs. The ultimate goal is to build on a child's social and academic skills so he or she can return to school ready to succeed.

Each child receives an individually designed treatment plan, which is monitored and modified as necessary. These plans are carried out under the supervision of mental health professionals, specially trained staff, and a licensed psychologist.

Children are placed in groups of up to 18 with 6 staff members to supervise activities. The group stays together throughout the day so that children learn to work and cooperate in a group setting. Children spend two hours daily working in a therapeutic classroom setting to carry out behavior modification plans designed to address each child's specific needs in the classroom setting.

For the remainder of the day, children participate in therapeutically based recreational activities. Group time includes age appropriate discussion, sports, and other recreational and community-based activities. Children also participate in group problem solving discussions, social skills training and other treatment strategies. The Summer Treatment Program works to achieve the following goals:

- ◆ Improve interaction with other children
- ◆ Improve learning skills
- ◆ Develop life skills and social awareness
- ◆ Learn to improve attention & concentration
- ◆ Learn to follow through with instructions, complete tasks & comply with adult requests
- ◆ Improve self-esteem while developing personal, recreational and academic skills
- ◆ Evaluate the impact of medication on the child's academic and social abilities

Who's Eligible?

ACRP's Summer Treatment Program is for children ages 5-12 and adolescents 13-15 years of age. Children with or eligible for Medical Assistance coverage (Access Card) and a mental health diagnosis of Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder or similar disorders are accepted. The child must be diagnosed by a psychiatrist or licensed psychologist who also indicates that the services are medically necessary. Referrals can be made by school staff, mental health professionals, physicians, agencies and parents. Only children who meet the above criteria will be considered. ACRP can assist you in obtaining an access card, and provides screenings and evaluations. Call today for an appointment or more information!

ACRP's replication of the program has been recognized at the International Children and Adults with Attention Deficit Disorder (CHADD) Conference in Denver, Colorado (2003) and Nashville, Tennessee (2004) as one of 20 innovative programs that services children and families with Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder in the United States.
